In recent years, scientific research of comets has increased because of a growing interest in the origin of the sun and its revolving planets. Scientists want to know how comets are formed. They think that such information will help explain the origin of the solar system.

The word “comet” comes from Greek and it means “hairy objects”. In history, comets have a special place. People believed that they would bring news of death, destruction or military victories.

The tails of comets provide viewers with wonderful sights at night. Comets' tails are usually millions of kilometers long and sometimes maybe even longer than that.

The written records of comets can be traced back as early as the year 1779 B.C. The Chinese kept careful records and so did the Babylonians. Aristotle was interested in comets. He thought that they began as burning gases in the earth's atmosphere.

The most famous comet in history is called Halley's Comet which will reappear at an interval of 75 and a half years. It was named after Edmond Halley, an English scientist. He predicted the appearance of the comet in 1758, sixteen years after his death. Halley's comet is extremely bright and has two tails. The last time it appeared was in 1986.
